HOUSELESS

Harboring Guide

Society is moving towards homeless eradication practices. This is a guide to protect our houseless neighbors from the state. First they open the camps. Then they make them mandatory. Then they become detention centers.

I am now facing fines and jail time if I put so much as a single tent on my private property. You will also become an enemy of the state if you do the same. History repeats itself.

This eradication scheme is directly from the Nazi Final Solution play book.

We must stand up for what is right. We must stand up for our houseless neighbors who are considered diseased rats by the government.

This is how to do it safely and effectively.

Written by Sage Lewis - I have sheltered 100s of houseless people on my private property and have met extreme opposition for providing any help every step of the way. This is what I have learned on how to shelter houseless people in a way that will be effective for them and safe for you.

STEP 1

Do Not Shelter Houseless People In Your Actual House

There is nothing more dangerous to your personal safety and the safety of your belongings and your entire house than letting a homeless person live in your actual house.

FIRST, they will have tenant rights. In my city all a cop asks is if a person has personal belongings in the house. If they do, they are allowed to live there until they are legally evicted.

SECOND, there is a lot of extreme mental illness issues in the houseless community. I have sheltered many people who believe that “they” are out to get them. This kind of person becomes extremely dangerous to live with.

THIRD, taking care of a houseless person is exhausting. If they move into your house you will be their 24/7 support system. You will be a permanent life raft. They easily could drag you down with them.

FOURTH, they are in a desperate situation and so it's likely they will do desperate things. I've known several drug dealers who have tried to help homeless people only to have their drugs and money and guns stolen. AND THAT'S A DRUG DEALER.

Of course there are people that shelter homeless people in their homes. But if what I'm saying to you on this page is news to you: YOU ARE NOT THAT PERSON. Read on. There are better ways you can help.

STEP 2

Places that make very good shelter options

These ideas might seem cruel and inhumane to you. But to a person who has been on the streets for years, they are going to feel like the Ritz-Carlton.

Garages are the best, especially if they have electricity. Just secure your belongings. Theft in the houseless community is everywhere. Generators, power tools, gasoline, lawn mowers. If you leave those in your garage just expect they will disappear.

Sheds are the next best thing. They don't have to have electricity. But an extension cord would be incredibly wonderful.

Back porches are great. Just staple some tarps around the openings and you are good to go. But this could draw attention if your neighbors can see it. THEY WILL REPORT YOU.

A tent in a yard with a tall privacy fence is great. Just make sure the tent cannot be seen by your neighbors or the street.

Anticipate that ANYONE that can see what you are doing will report you. We are living in a police state where your neighbor will happily report you and relish in any kind of fines or criminal charges you receive for helping your fellow Americans. We are always only inches away from a genocidal state.

STEP 3

Bathroom Plans

I can't say this enough: DO NOT GIVE UNLIMITED ACCESS TO YOUR HOUSE TO A HOUSELESS PERSON. You will live to regret it.

They don't love it, but a bucket is fine.

A cassette toilet with the chemicals that they sell with them will be better than they have probably used in years.

Monitored bathroom use inside your house for showering at specific times is incredible. Just be VERY CLEAR about the times and rules. They will push it as far as you let them.

You don't actually even need to address this issue if you don't want to. Most houseless people will take care of their business without you having any ideas what happens to it.

Toilet paper, hand sanitizer and wet wipes will change their lives if you can afford to supply them.

STEP 4

WATER

If you have an outside spigot that a person could use that would be amazing.

Your water bill will probably go up. Possibly considerably. My water bill in August is usually over $700. I shelter a lot of people. So yours probably won't be that bad. But it will definitely go up.

If you fill up an Igloo cooler with water that would be totally fine too.

And not having water is also totally fine. ANYTHING you provide is world's better than from where the person you are helping came from.

STEP 5

FIRE

Many houseless people use fire for many things. From cooking, to stripping copper wire to sell to the scrap yards.

Because I am who I am in my city, neighbors call the police ANY time someone starts a fire. If you become known for having the audacity to shelter people who have nowhere to go you will experience the same thing.

If you just want to help houseless people DO NOT LET PEOPLE KNOW YOU ARE SHELTERING THEM. It is illegal and hated by the government and most Americans.

Try to discourage fires. They are a real hassle. But don't be surprised if you start to see fires.

Having a water hose the person can access is great. A fire extinguisher is also good. I recommend putting a smoke detector and CO detector in their living space. But don't be surprised if they dismantle it for the batteries or because it's annoying them when they make fires.

STEP 6

DEALING WITH FRIENDS

If you end up being cool, the word is going to spread that you take care of houseless people. More people are going to come.

Houseless people are quite passive and timid. They rarely will put up a fight if other people move in. YOU ARE GOING TO NEED TO CONTROL THAT.

It's going to break your heart when an 18 year old pregnant woman shows up at your door in the middle of the winter desperately begging for a place to sleep because she has nowhere else to go.

It won't end there. All the stories are tragic and terrible. HOLD YOUR GROUND.

If you only have room for one person or one couple THAT'S FINE. Make the other people leave. If you don't, you will get over run. People will find out and your entire operation will come crashing down. Take it from someone who knows.

STEP 7

END IT WHENEVER YOU WANT

It is ALWAYS totally fine to kick all these people out of your land. You have done more than 99% of all people, churches and anyone who dares call themselves a humanitarian.

It is fine to yell at these people. It is fine to judge these people. It is fine to be as human about the entire process as you want.

Houseless people will make you question TO YOUR VERY CORE why you ever thought it was a good idea to help people in the first place.

BUT I'LL TELL YOU WHY YOU DID IT...

You didn't do it because you are a good person. You are as much of a piece of shit as the rest of us. You did it because not doing it is cruel and wrong on every imaginable level. You might end up hating houseless people along the way and still keep helping (or swearing you'll never help again). ALL OF THAT IS FINE. You are the hero these people need even though you are probably just as broken and fucked up as they are.

Thank you. I'm SO THANKFUL for you.
